There Is A Quiet Spirit

There is a quiet spirit in these halls
Whose floors to Aggies' tread no more resound.
Strange alien sounds now echo o'er the ground
Which once reflected only Aggie calls.

The gentle branches of the elms outspread
Murmur in secret wonder at it all.
A foreign group emerges from Ag Hall.
It is not true the spirit of West Central's dead!

In many a classroom here the students plied
Their earnest task and sought to learn.
Knowledge of life on farm their one concern
As side by side with fellow men they vied.

In many school events they played their part
To bring West Central just a little fame,
To glorify each individual's name,
Enacted scenes which really touched the heart.

The spirit gives us cues once more to see
The drama of West Central's golden years.
The curtain falls, the actor disappears,
And soon there's nothing but a memory.

Oh, let that quiet spirit still prevail
As onward on its course the college keeps,
Onward the course of education sweeps!
Could we but judge, our brief rehearsal done;
West Central's glory and the college dream are one.

West Central: Fifty-three Years

DR. T. H. FENSKE, Associate Dean

Fifty-three years ago, in October of 1910, the West Central School of Agriculture opened its doors to students of the area who were at least fourteen years of age and who had completed the eighth grade in public school. Over 7000 students have enrolled, many of them remaining to graduate from the three-year course, and later from the fourth year which permitted them to enter college or a university if they wished. In all of the years that have elapsed the entrance requirements have remained substantially the same.

As early as 1907 there was talk of an agricultural school at Morris. Representative William C. Bicknell introduced a bill in the legislature calling for the establishment of agricultural schools in each of the congressional districts. He found, however, that there was little interest in his bill and decided to wait until a more favorable time.

In the late 1880's a Catholic Order, the Sisters of Mercy, conducted a school for Indians on the site now occupied by the West Central School; this was discontinued about 1893. In 1897 the United States government purchased the property and opened an Indian School. This operation was discontinued July 1, 1909.

The fact that the Indian school was scheduled to close was apparently known to the Minnesota representatives in Congress because in December of 1908 a bill was introduced to the Congress which gave the State of Minnesota the property at Morris.

A pertinent paragraph in the bill read as follows:

"Provided, that said lands and buildings shall be held and maintained by the State of Minnesota as an agricultural school, and that Indian pupils shall at all times be admitted to such school free of charge for tuition and on terms of equality with white pupils."

This bill passed Congress in March of 1909 and immediately the Minnesota legislature sent a delegation of about fourteen people to Morris to look over the property. They were entertained by the Morris civic leaders at a dinner and the next day inspected the property. A press report indicated that all of the delegates expressed themselves as in favor of accepting the property as a place to establish an agricultural school.

The 1909 legislature used these words in the bill accepting the property:

"The said lands and buildings described in Section One hereof shall be held and maintained by the State of Minnesota as an agricultural school, and Indian pupils shall at all times be admitted to said school free of charge for tuition and on terms of equality with white pupils."

The report of the President of the University for the year 1911-12 makes the following comments about the land and buildings:

"The original farm comprised 292 acres. The following tracts are rented: fifty-seven acres from L. C. Spooner, ten acres from George Darling, and seven and one-half acres from the Cemetery Association." (Note: subsequently these tracts were purchased by the University.)

At the time of the opening of the school the following buildings with the estimated value of each were on the grounds: Office, $15,000; Agronomy, $12,000; Home Economics, $12,000; Dining Hall, $20,000; Laundry, $4,000; Hospital, $10,000; Cottage, $2,500; Warehouse, $1,500; Ice House, $100; Morgue, $200; Machine Shed, $50; Barn, $2,500; Silo, $450; total, $80,300.

It is of interest to note that the only remaining building from the old Indian School is the one listed as the Agronomy Building, now known as Music Hall, which was built in 1899 and remodeled in 1921.

The people of Morris were anxious to have the school started as soon as possible. A press report released about the middle of May, 1909, stated that the Indian Department was willing to turn the property over to the State on July 1, 1909; they were not required to do so until a year later.

The legislature, however, had made no provision for financing the school as early as 1909. It was thought that the sum of $10,000 would be necessary and a citizens' committee was established to investigate ways and means of raising that amount of money. Apparently nothing came of the effort. In September of 1909 the Honorable A. E. Rice, a Regent of the University, and D. D. Mayne, Principal of the School of Agriculture at St. Paul, visited Morris. At this time all possibility of opening the school in the fall of 1909 was dismissed.

Plans were then made to open the school in the fall of 1910. The Regents employed E. C. Higbie, then Superintendent of Schools at Canby, Minnesota, as the first Superintendent. Superintendent and Mrs. Higbie arrived at the school about the first of August, 1910. He immediately plunged into work and made known to the people of the area that the school would open on October 3, 1910.

On August 5, 1910, a special program was held at the school to register students and to inform parents of what their sons and daughters could expect in the way of instruction.

The first faculty in addition to the Superintendent included Miss Susan Wilder, Home Economics; Miss Irma Hathorn, preceptress of the girls' dormitory; Mr. G. A. Ingalls, Animal Husbandry; Mr. Ernest Raymond, Instructor in Iron Work, and Mr. Irwin Snortum, Accountant.

The school opened on October 3, 1910, with 103 students enrolled.

The buildings inherited from the Indian School apparently were not in first-class condition. In a column published in the local paper early in November, 1910, there appears this note: "The janitors and plumbers are kept busy these days repairing broken pipes. A little extra steam finds a weak place. The carpenters have been pushing things to get the buildings ready for cold weather. This week should see most of the work finished." . . . "The forges ordered in August have just arrived. As soon as they can be set up Mr. Raymond will be able to keep most of the boys busy all of the time." . . . "Part of the gas plant arrived and Miss Wilder is patiently waiting for the remainder so she can start the cooking courses." It can be seen that the job of getting a new institution underway in a short period of time does present difficulties.

Student activities began almost as soon as classes were underway. The first football game was played about the middle of November, 1910, with Morris High School. In spite of high hopes on the part of the Aggies the final score read Morris High School 10, Aggies 0.

Very early the West Central School became an educational center for Western Minnesota. In addition to the regular school course there have been many community and area-wide meetings, short courses, and special field days. The first short course, called the "Farmers Short Course", was held January 10 - 13, 1911. The registration fee was $1.00 for the course. The announcement stated that a limited number of people could board at the school for 20c per meal. This type of four-day short course was continued through the year 1917. According to a report of the University President, "the crowded conditions of the dormitories, dining hall, classrooms, etc., made it necessary to abandon the short course during the last year." Other short courses such as tractor schools, Woman's Week, 4-H Club Week, and special one-day events replaced the four-day Farmers Short Course.

The legislative session of 1911 marked the beginning of appropriations for the physical plant and for other purposes at the West Central School and Station. A total of $221,500 was appropriated. This provided for, among other things, the first two dormitories to be erected by the University; buildings known as Spooner Hall for boys and the Girls' Dormitory for girls. Money was also included for a central heating plant.

The second year of school opened on October 2, 1911. In anticipation of an increased enrollment there had been several additions to the staff, including P. E. Miller in Agronomy and Station Work and Margaret Jones in Home Economics. Mr. Miller later became Superintendent and Miss Jones became Mrs. P. E. Miller. She now resides in St. Paul, Minnesota. Other additions to the staff were Elizabeth Mott, English and Mathematics; O. O. Bye, Carpenter and Superintendent of Buildings, and Mary Wheaton, who was in charge of the Library and worked in the school office.

Little by little the school facilities were improved and the curriculum was strengthened. At the completion of the second year of classes the first commencement was held on March 22, 1912. Five graduates, George W. Leuty, William Jongeword, Eugene W. Scott, Herbert F. Jongeword and Henry J. Zahl, were given diplomas; each one gave a talk on some phase of agriculture.

In the summer of 1912 the Department of Public Instruction, now the State Department of Education, conducted a summer school on the West Central Campus. The Department announced instruction in all subjects required for a State First Grade Certificate. Instruction was offered in Arithmetic, Grammar, Geography, U. S. History, Civics, Physics, Reading, Spelling, Composition, Penmanship, Algebra, Plane Geometry, Physiology, and Physical Geography. In addition, the announcement stated that work was to be given in Agriculture, Manual Training, Domestic Science, Domestic Art, Drawing, Music, and Plain Model Work.

The first session opened June 17, 1912, and closed July 28, 1912. These sessions were continued at least through the summer of 1917. As late as the early 1940's it was not uncommon for the Superintendent's Office at Morris to receive requests for a transcript of credits earned in these summer sessions. The records were apparently kept by the Department of Public Instruction because there are no such records in the old files of the West Central School of Agriculture.

Early experimental work in the Department of Agronomy, 1911-12, was conducted along two principal lines: the adaptation of corn and small grains to meet more fully the needs and requirements of the soil and climatic conditions of the section of the state; and secondly, the application of systems of crop rotations to the farms of this section. The more important varieties of small grain were put into variety testing plots from which selections were to be made and the most promising varieties increased.

Corn experiments were started with Minnesota No. 13 Corn to fix more fully the breed type characteristics and adapt it to this section of the state. At that time little or nothing was known about the genetics of corn, and it was not until considerably later that the realization came to the plant breeders that if they were really to fix characteristics in corn they must subject it to a period of inbreeding. Even so, the Morris strain of Minnesota No. 13 achieved considerable popularity with the farmers of the area.

In the 1913 report of the Dean of the Department of Agriculture it was stated that the most important need of the substations was for additional livestock. He remarked that the Crookston Station was now fairly well supplied but at Morris provision must be made for good representatives of the important breeds for school and station purposes.

In the early years the course of study in the school was limited to three years of six months each. The first mention of a fourth year is found in a report for 1915-16 which states that two students returned for a fourth year of study.

During the summer of 1915 two men joined the staff who were destined to finish their professional careers at the school and station. They were E. J. Volden and P. S. Jordan. E. J. Volden came on June 1, 1915, as cashier and later was promoted to Instructor and subsequently to Assistant Professor. He was in charge of the business office and taught courses in Bookkeeping and Commercial Law. Many students remember him with mixed emotions. He appeared to be a strict individual in collecting bills and in his classes but in reality was kindly and soft hearted. Those superintendents under whom he served can testify that many times he worked out arrangements so that a student who was short of cash might stay in school. He retired on June 30, 1955, and passed away October 20, 1959.

Professor Jordan came two months after E. J. Volden had arrived on the scene, August 1, 1915, with the rank of Instructor in Animal Husbandry. He was promoted to Assistant Professor in 1921 and later, July 1, 1948, to Associate Professor. P. S. Jordan achieved national recognition with his research work with western lambs. He served on the staff until his death early in 1956.

The First Annual Station Meet, forerunner of the present day Station Field Day, was held in July of 1916. Members of the Board of Regents and the President of the University, George E. Vincent, were present. By this time Experiment Station work was well underway. At the first station meet visitors saw a thousand field plots. Work was being carried on in studies of individual problems of soil fertilization, crop rotations, variety testing, seeding conditions, grass crops, and adaptability of crops. Swine feeding experiments were also being carried on and a beef cattle herd was on display. In the press reports special mention was made of winter wheat, alfalfa, corn, and swine feeding.

In 1915 a series of experimental plots were begun in a rotation experiment using various forms of phosphate. This experiment was to have been continued for ten years; however, it is still being carried on in modified form and is one of the oldest, if not the oldest, rotation experiment in this part of the United States. A report made in 1918 stated that the fertilizer experiments at the West Central Station indicated that the use of acid phosphate may be found highly profitable on soils in the western part of the state where grain had long been grown.

Mention has been made of the first football game which was held shortly after the school opened. Inter-school debates were soon added as a student activity. In the early days P. E. Miller was not only the Agronomist and Farm Manager but achieved considerable distinction as debate coach. Other student activities included basketball, declamation, class plays, and student field days.

In February of 1917 Superintendent E. C. Higbie surprised the community by announcing that he was going to leave at the end of the school year to do graduate work at the University of Chicago and later at Columbia University in New York City. In passing it should be noted that he did earn a doctor's degree and served for several years as President of Madison Normal, now General B. Beadle State College at Madison, South Dakota, and ended his career as President of a teachers' college in Washington, D. C. One day in the late 1930's or early 1940's he returned to the campus and the writer, who was the third superintendent of the school, had the pleasure of visiting with the first superintendent who, for an entire evening, recalled early experiences at West Central.

P. E. Miller was chosen Acting Superintendent to replace Mr. Higbie, effective April 1, 1917, and in August of that year became the second Superintendent of West Central.

Some other interesting things occurred in 1917. The legislature made an appropriation of $80,000 for a combined Dining Hall, Auditorium, and Gymnasium. This is the building which now houses the Dining Hall on the first two floors and what has been known as Junior Girls' Dormitory on the top two floors. This year also marked the beginning of the "West Central School News", a quarterly publication which has been continued to the present time. In 1917 the nation was involved in World War I and the school and experiment station, at the request of Dean A. F. Woods, who was the top administrative agricultural officer in the University, concentrated on the production of field crops and livestock. Also in 1917 the winter course or second term of school received special emphasis. The Engineering Department offered special one term courses in Drainage, Gas Engines, Farm Machinery, Blacksmithing, and Carpentry. In addition, there were courses in Farm Management, Dairy Cattle, Beef Stock, Hog Selection and Feeding, as well as courses with special appeal to girls. The emphasis on the winter term for those who could attend the school for only a short time continued well through the 1940's. Actually it was only after World War II that enrollment was such that no special effort was made to attract additional students into the winter term of school.

On August 1, 1918, Roy O. Bridgford joined the staff as an Instructor in Agronomy and Soils. He is remembered by many students who sat in his classes and by many farmers of Western Minnesota who depended upon him for advice and counsel on what varieties and crops to grow. He retired on June 30, 1956, with the rank of Associate Professor. However, he continued to serve the University from February 2, 1957, through July 26, 1961, as Associate Professor with the Korean Cooperative Project at Seoul National University.

During the school year of 1918 the West Central School was closed for twenty-one days because of the influenza epidemic which swept the country. There were 116 cases among the students and the school was saddened by the deaths of three members of the student body.

By 1919 the enrollment in the fall term of school had climbed to 164; this was announced as the highest enrollment to date for the fall term. Total enrollment for the year including the winter term was 257.

SUPT. P. E. MILLER — 1919-1938

In the spring of 1920 it was announced that Agricultural Hall, now known as the Humanities Building, was to be erected; $85,000 had been provided by the legislature for its construction. This building was added to in 1949. In 1920 the new boys' dormitory, Senior Hall, was also under construction.

March 24, 1921, just nine years after the first class of five graduated, fifty-one students received diplomas at the commencement exercises. Dr. R. W. Thatcher, then Dean of Agriculture at the University of Minnesota, gave the Commencement address. By this time a well-defined pattern of commencement week activities had developed. These activities included the Superintendent's Reception for the graduating class, Baccalaureate Services on the Sunday preceding commencement, an all-school party, a class play, and finally the big day of commencement.

On October 1, 1922, a man who was destined to play an important role in the affairs of the school and station, joined the staff. He was Allen W. Edson, who for two years had been County Agent in Stevens County. He came to the school in the capacity of Instructor in Poultry and Business. During his long tenure, culminating in death, he served as chairman of the scholarship committee, school and station Horticulturist, Instructor in Farm Management and Rural Sociology, and at times in livestock work. His final years were spent as Superintendent of the West Central School and Station.

It is interesting to note that in the same year, 1922, it was possible for students to attend the West Central School for the entire year for $150.00.

Another person who served the school for a long period of time came on October 1, 1923. Alex Bernard Rolfe was born in England and was in business at Wadena at the time of his appointment. A. B. Rolfe is best remembered by freshman boys as preceptor of Spooner Hall and by male students as an artist in iron working. His classes in forge work, gas and electric arc welding were always filled and many farmers today in Western Minnesota do their own welding because of the instruction they received from A. B. Rolfe. Many of his students went into the commercial welding field. A. B. Rolfe retired on June 30, 1956.

The beauty of campus with its magnificent trees and landscaping may be credited to J. A. Anderson who joined the staff in 1916 to teach music and chemistry. He retired in 1959. Most of the pictures of the school and campus used in the Moccasin and other school publicity during these years were taken, developed, and printed by him.

Livestock herds and flocks at the West Central Station received a great deal of publicity in 1923. A crossbred steer bred at the station won first place in two different classes at the world-famous International Livestock Show held in Chicago, and was named Reserve Champion of the entire show. The University entries in swine, a pen of Berkshire barrows and a pen of Poland Chinas won Grand Championship and Reserve Championship of the show respectively.

In 1924 the old Home Economics Building was completely rebuilt and remodeled. At that time it was said that the structure would be one of the best equipped in the state. By the time it was torn down, in 1954, because of settling and cracking walls, it was outdated and deemed impractical to repair. It was replaced by a new building during the years 1954-55.

When students returned to school in the fall of 1924 they found a new Administration Building which in reality was a rebuilding of the old and entirely inadequate Administration Building inherited from the Indian School. A 500 seat auditorium, a library, and a new lobby were added and the old part was entirely refurnished. This building stood until 1958 when it was razed and replaced by a new building now known as Edson Hall.

In 1926 a new boys' dormitory was added. The building is now known as Junior Hall.

The year 1927 marked the beginning of Sheep and Lamb Feeders Day, an event continued to the present time. Several hundred feeders and farmers attended and listened to the results of the experimental trial. Professor P. S. Jordan reported that lambs fed a ration of shelled corn, alfalfa hay, and oil meal made the best gains. Dean W. C. Coffey, now deceased, presided. Those who appeared on the program were the late W. H. Peters, Head of the Animal Husbandry Department of the University; Dr. A. A. Dowell, who later became Assistant Dean of the Institute of Agriculture in charge of the College of Agriculture, Forestry, and Home Economics; Professor P. A. Anderson of the Animal Husbandry Department on the St. Paul Campus, now retired, and Mr. John Haw of the Northern Pacific Railroad, also now retired.

It has been said that the West Central Station has done more experimental work in lamb feeding than any other single experiment station in the United States. Lamb Feeders Day now attracts feeders and farmers from several states each year.

In February of 1928 the livestock and grain judging teams from West Central scored a double victory at the Red River Valley Winter Shows held in Crookston.

The year 1928 marked the appearance on the campus of a person who has become known to every student who has attended since that date, and to many who were here before. Miss Nanna Jelstrup, who had been principal of the Morris High School, became Dean of Women and began teaching courses in Algebra and Geometry. For many years she has served as faculty advisor to the students who publish the "Moccasin".

In the spring of 1929 money was allotted for the construction of a new gymnasium. At the student reunion program, June 20, 1929, Superintendent P. E. Miller announced that construction would begin on the building early in the spring of 1930.

The fall term in 1929 marked the appearance of the writer on the campus. He came to take a temporary position teaching classes in Agronomy and Soils during the time that Professor R. O. Bridgford was away doing graduate study. Little did he realize in September of 1929, as he moved into Senior Hall, that he would spend the next seventeen years at West Central, nine as a teacher and Home Project Supervisor, and eight as Superintendent.

Another appointment in 1929 was that of Lloyd Benner as assistant in the Agricultural Engineering Department. He now holds the position of Chief Operating Engineer on the Minneapolis Campus of the University of Minnesota and is responsible for one of the largest steam heating plants in the State of Minnesota.

In 1929, this item appeared in the local paper: "In as great a football game as has ever been played on a local field, the Morris Aggies defeated their traditional rival from Crookston 19 to 0 in their Annual Homecoming game." This comment is descriptive of a long and healthy rivalry that has extended between the Schools of Agriculture in athletics as well as in other extracurricular activities.

In the years before automobiles and good roads made it possible for students to go home weekends, school events were well attended. Thanksgiving was a big school family affair with singing by the girls, who came into the Dining Hall in what was known as a Priscilla Procession, a class basketball tournament, a big turkey dinner, a lyceum program in the afternoon, and in the evening a school dance.

In 1929-30 enrollment reached an all-time high of 388 students. No one could foresee what was to happen in the next three years. In 1930-31 there were 385 students attending, but then the world-wide depression began to have its effect. In 1931-32 enrollment dropped to 356, and in 1932-33, a year of low prices and poor crops in Western Minnesota, a low point of 187 was reached; this was the lowest enrollment since the war year of 1917-18 when 172 students registered. Then came student aid programs such as the National Youth Administration, and also the creation of student jobs from positions formerly held by full-time employees. There was, so to speak, a tightening of the belt everywhere. Enrollment began to rise again and 1934-35 saw the figure go over the three hundred mark again with 318 enrolled. The high point in the 1930's was reached with 391 students in 1935-36 and the all-time high came in 1947-48 with 455 students.

Mention has been made of the livestock herds and flocks at the station. In the early 1930's the Experiment Station became rather well known for its purebred Percheron horses. At the Station Field Day in July, 1933, a horse judging contest was held. Of course the horses gave way to mechanization and for several years there have been no work horses on the station farm.

About this time the station did some pioneer work in the crossbreeding of swine. Three years of crossbreeding experimental work was explained at the 1933 station field day.

In 1934 drought struck the State of Minnesota and especially the western half of the state. A federal and state drought relief program was organized and Superintendent P. E. Miller was named State Drought Relief Head. For several months he had his headquarters on the St. Paul Campus of the University then known as the University Farm. During his absence, Allen W. Edson served as Acting Superintendent.

Changing conditions in agriculture brought about a shift of emphasis in subject matter in the decade of the 1930's. More emphasis was placed on quality of produce and economy in production. New courses added included Farm Finance including a study of the Farm Credit Administration, a course in economics and in the Home Economics Department an "Economics of Buying" course. It was the aim of these courses to give the student a foundation which would enable him to understand more clearly the economic changes in their relationship to farm people.

During the legislative session of 1935 a bill was passed which provided for payment of tuition from state aid funds for students attending the schools of agriculture who were eighth grade graduates and not high school graduates. It was expected that this would tend to increase attendance at the schools of agriculture and subsequent experience proved this to be correct.

As 1937 came to a close a forthcoming change in administration was announced. P. E. Miller resigned his position as Superintendent to become Director of the Agricultural Extension Service of the University of Minnesota on February 1, 1938. Theodore H. Fenske was named Acting Superintendent, and on July 1, 1938 became the third Superintendent of the West Central School and Station.

In the latter half of 1940 the West Central School began a new project in the form of a primary aviation training school. The West Central School offered ground school instruction and a flight contractor at the newly established airport handled the flight instruction. At the time of establishment this was known as Civilian Pilot Training but later was renamed War Training Service. Several individuals who are now leaders in the Flying Farmers organization of Minnesota received their initial training at the West Central School.

World War II was a period of uncertainty and brought new problems to the school and station. Former students were in service in many parts of the world and several of them gave their lives in the global struggle.

Food, gasoline, and tire rationing and labor shortages were problems faced by the administration of the school and station during this period. These were common problems on many West Central Minnesota farms.

SUPT. T. H. FENSKE — 1938-1947

SUPT. A. W. EDSON — 1947-1958

On July 1, 1947 Superintendent Fenske left Morris to take the position of Associate Director of Field Operations for the Department of Agriculture, now known as the Institute of Agriculture. Allen W. Edson became Acting Superintendent and in December was named the fourth Superintendent of the school.

The Morris Tribune in commenting on Mr. Fenske's departure said: "Under Mr. Fenske's guidance the West Central School reached an all-time high in attendance with a student enrollment of 446."

The faculty personnel increased from 24 in 1938 to a staff of 29 for the coming year. The Experiment Station too has expanded its activities to a point where it is now a major unit of the Minnesota Agricultural Experiment Station.

In November of 1947 the Regents of the University created a new position of Associate Superintendent and appointed A. C. Heine to fill the post. A. C. Heine first came to the school in 1917, was away for a period of service in the Navy during World War I, and then returned to the school and station as Head of the Agricultural Engineering Department. Mr. Heine continued in the post of Assistant Superintendent until July 16, 1949, when he was appointed to the position of Superintendent of the Agricultural Experiment Station at Rosemount.

The first really serious fire in the history of the school and station occurred on October 5, 1949, when the Girls' Dormitory was heavily damaged by a fire of unknown origin. Fortunately the fire occurred in the daytime and the building was quickly emptied; no personal injuries were suffered. The attic and third floor were completely gutted and there was lesser damage to the lower floors. This building was originally built in 1912 and was later rebuilt without the third floor. It is in use at the present time.

Mention has been made of the fact that in the early years the regular course of study at West Central was for three years of six months each. As early as 1915 students returned for a fourth year of work but it was not until 1950 that a change was made to include the fourth year as a regular part of the requirements for graduation. By 1952 this changeover had been completed and since that year diplomas have been awarded upon the completion of four years of work.

The 1953 legislature made funds available for two new buildings on the campus, a new Home Economics Building to replace the old one and a new greenhouse. In 1957 an appropriation was made to replace the old Administration Building. With the exception of appropriations made since that date for the rehabilitation of Spooner Hall and of Junior Hall, this marked the last legislative appropriation for the construction of new buildings on the Morris Campus.

Superintendent Edson had looked forward to the day when the new Administration Building provided by the 1957 legislature would be completed. He was a member of the University Building Committee that planned the new building. Unfortunately, his dream of moving into a new building was not to be realized. On the day school opened, September 29, 1958, after a relatively short illness, he passed away.

H. G. Croom, who had joined the West Central staff on July 1, 1943, was appointed Acting Superintendent and served through the fiscal year of 1958-59. On July 1, 1959, Dr. Rodney A. Briggs became the fifth Superintendent of the West Central School and Station.

As early as 1957 various groups in Western Minnesota began talking about establishing college level work at the West Central Campus. An organization known as the West Central Educational Development Association was formed and worked diligently in the 1959 legislature to secure an appropriation for such a venture. They were not successful, but the legislature of 1959 did pass a resolution that the Board of Regents of the University should consider establishing college level courses at the schools and experiment stations located at Morris and

ACTING SUPT. H. G. CROOM — 1958-1959

Crookston. Early in November, 1959, the Regents announced that they were proceeding with plans to run a pilot project at Morris and that the freshman year of college work would be offered in the fall of 1960. They also indicated that no students would be accepted in the School of Agriculture and that the presently enrolled students would be carried through with the last class graduating in the spring of 1963.

Former students and graduates of West Central could not help having a feeling of regret as they thought of the fact that their old school would be changing; yet they knew that changing times brought new needs and that the buildings and campus of the school could be used to advantage to create a center of college level instruction so sorely lacking in certain areas of Western Minnesota.

Shortly after the Regents' announcement, a Morris College Advisory Committee was created. Superintendent Briggs was asked to assume additional duties as Acting Dean of the new college. He carried this load for two years, and on July 1, 1961, chose to go on as Dean of the University of Minnesota, Morris, when the positions of Dean and Superintendent were separated. Ralph Smith became the sixth and present Superintendent of the West Central School and Experiment Station on July 1, 1961. It is interesting to note that he is the first graduate of a School of Agriculture (West Central, 1934) to become Superintendent of the institution from which he graduated.

Theodore S. Long joined the staff to teach English in 1925. In extra curricular activities he coached debate teams for over twenty years, as well as declamation and numerous class plays. When the University of Minnesota, Morris was established, H. G. Croom, T. S. Long and Glenn Daniels were three faculty members who were transferred from the school faculty to that of the University of Minnesota, Morris.

Space has not permitted a listing of names and accomplishments of all the people who have served the West Central School and Station. Students and graduates will remember Glenn Prickett, B. E. Youngquist, Theodore Nelson, Dorothy Zellers, Tone

SUPT. R. A. BRIGGS — 1959 - 1961

Halvorson Long, Helen Swan, Julius Felt, Albert Anderson, and many more. Students today will remember the present faculty, including Superintendent Ralph Smith as well as Leslie K. Lindor and Roy L. Thompson, graduates of the school who have joined the staff; Wesley H. Gray, Harley Hanke, Karl R. Bornhoft, Fern B. Johnson, Thelma Gilbert, Nanna Jelstrup, Leland G. Wilken, LaVonne M. Littlefield, and Rosella Dambowy. At present the Station staff includes in the Dining Hall former students Lillian Erdahl and Ada Nygaard, and in the Animal Husbandry Department, Walter Hokanson, Glendon Rose and David Sandstrom on the Station staff.

Many Civil Service staff members have contributed to the ongoing of the school. Oscar Beckstrom, who served for many years as Farm Foreman until his untimely death in February, 1962, is typical of a long list of employees who have served well and faithfully through the years.

The Agricultural Experiment Station has continued to grow. Crops and Soils, Horticulture, Farm Management, Animal and Dairy Husbandry projects in ever-increasing numbers continue to supply information that can be used by the farmers of West Central Minnesota.

What of the future of West Central? It has been said many times by University people in positions of authority and responsibility that the Experiment Station work will be continued and strengthened. The school as it has existed for fifty-three years will no longer function as a combination academic and vocational institution of approximately high school grade. The name of the West Central School will continue in short courses, specialized conferences, educational field days, and the like. As time moves forward, new ideas and new uses for the West Central School and Station will emerge. One thing is most certain, as has been true ever since October, 1910, the personnel who will continue on will endeavor to serve the public in the best way possible. The spirit of the West Central School of Agriculture and Experiment Station will continue to live in Western Minnesota for many years to come.

EXPERIMENTAL PLOTS

A Look Back - - -

R. O. BRIDGFORD, Professor Emeritus

In 1918 and during the early 20's the West Central School seemed like a unique institution to me, a secondary school operating for a six months' period, teaching the 3 R's in addition to such vocational subjects as Engineering, Agronomy, Animal Husbandry, Carpentry, Horticulture and Home Economics. Classes were held five days a week, Tuesday through Saturday, none on Monday. This arrangement seemed to work better for students, most of whom came in by train. So the "no Monday" sessions enabled them to go home over the weekend and return by Monday night. However, a larger percentage of students remained for the weekend and thus there was always the problem of entertainment to be provided. Radios and television were, of course, non-existent and talking pictures unknown. So it was up to the students, with faculty assistance, to plan and supply their own amusement, usually in the form of parties, an occasional dance, musicals, or in some cases a lyceum number or basketball game would be in order. With the advent of more automobiles, however, the Monday through Friday class schedule became the rule.

By October, 1918, West Central, now in its ninth year of existence, was an institution somewhat short in students, but long on extra curricular activities. There were three or four literary societies, Block and Bridle Club, musical organizations, an Engineers' Club, debating societies, Ribbon Key Club, a students' Rifle Club, a Y.M.C.A. and a Y.W.C.A., plus a staff for publishing the Moccasin. Membership in one or more was considered a mark of distinction and most students took advantage of it.

Football was in evidence, but because of the short season, scheduling of games created a problem. Basketball was all the rage with the so-called school team (varsity) vying with the numerous class teams for the better players. Girls, as well as boys, participated and the round robin "playoffs" for the Intramural Basketball Championship during the late winter months was one of the outstanding events of the year. Classes suffered but students had a good time. No less than three literary societies were in existence, the Agricolae and Vincent for boys and Ceres for girls. So with once a week meetings, faculty advisors for each were more than busy struggling with suitable programs and trying to maintain a reasonable percentage of attendances. Debating became very popular during those early years, too, and under Mr P. E. Miller's supervision was perhaps the outstanding school activity which maintained its popularity under Mr. T. S. Long's tutelage and championship teams were the rule rather than the exception. Students had to be ambitious to make these teams as there was a tremendous amount of work involved, as well as the ability to speak well. But there always seemed to be plenty of candidates as the rewards were great, not only from the mental and speaking training received, but always the lure of an outside trip for competitive debates. Candidates for the school team gained experience through membership in class teams.

Completion of the new gymnasium in 1930, with its fine dressing rooms, regulation basketball court, adequate seating capacity, and a fine swimming pool really was a big boost to the athletic program. For some reason very few students made use of the new swimming pool during the first couple of years of its existence; swimmers were more or less conspicuous by their absence. Fear of the water apparently was the deterrent, and it was not until Virgil Dwinell was appointed swimming instructor that this sport gained momentum and became one of the extremely popular school activities.

Enrollment, too, had much to do with influencing the trend of these extra activities. In the fall of 1919, for instance, there were 115 students who were taught by a faculty of 19. By 1930, three times as many, 351 students, were registered, but with an addition of only four faculty members. Larger classes and more of them were the rule rather than the exception and it was not unusual for a faculty member to have a teaching load of 20-25 hours per week besides his advisory duties with class activities. They were sorely pressed to give as much attention to outside activities as before.

Tragedy which struck the United States in the fall of 1918 with the outbreak of a most virulent epidemic of influenza did not spare the West Central School and at least half of the total student body was stricken. Dormitories became veritable hospitals, school was closed for a three week period and all healthy students sent home. Three deaths occurred on the campus. When classes were resumed, gauze face masks were required to be worn by all students and faculty as a precautionary measure. It would have been difficult to determine which was the more hazardous to the health and welfare of the individual, the threat of the disease or the soiled face masks worn continually. Teaching under such a handicap was very difficult.

Many were the traditions carried out during the years. "Homecoming" or the reunion of students during the summer, a "Freshman initiation" by the second year students which often got out of hand, the traditional football game with the arch rival, the Northwest School from Crookston, the annual reception for graduating seniors given by the Superintendent, sleigh ride parties with horse drawn sleds, St. Patrick's Day parade and evening show, a feature of the Engineering students during the early 20's, Thanksgiving Priscilla Procession by the girls, and the fall Parent's Day visitation which usually preceded the Thanksgiving recess. The latter might well be considered one of the finest traditions of the school since it afforded the parents an opportunity of seeing the school in action, of seeing at first hand their sons and daughters actually engaged in all their pursuits of learning. They, as well as the instructors, hoped this would enable these same students to assume greater responsibilities and be better able to carry out the tasks as future citizens of their home communities. This was a day set aside and dedicated to students, faculty, and parents, affording an opportunity for instructors and parents to become better acquainted, also a short respite for students and faculty over the weekend. To the best of my knowledge the first of these was held in 1929 and the last in 1962 with the phasing out of the last class of West Central.

One of the most notable turning points in the history of the West Central School came about in 1948 with the change from a three to a four year course and entering freshmen of that year were advised of the change. It meant the end of the so-called "special", "Post Graduate" or "advanced" students so that now all students planning to graduate knew they must complete four full years. However, it was understood that all graduates having necessary credentials would be accepted at the University of Minnesota or other colleges of the state. To the credit of the standards maintained by the West Central School, few if any of its graduates who elected to continue their education at these other institutions failed to make the grade and many graduated with honors.

During these early, formative years, it was clearly evident that the school was fulfilling its functions, if the numbers of students attending were any criterion. In many cases all children from a family attended. A son or daughter started, found the situation to their liking, so their parents continued sending all of them. I hope I may be pardoned for mentioning a couple of the families most outstanding in this respect. The Amos Stark family, for instance, whose eleven children received diplomas over a period of 18 years, and Edward Hansen of Graceville whose seven sons and two daughters all graduated between 1928 and 1940. Truly a remarkable record for both. There were many other families with a larger number of students that might well be mentioned.

The Experiment Station, though still young, very early began to play an important part as a practical supplement for the teaching program of the school. The various rotations that had been started, fertilizer trials, legume tests, corn improvement, seed grain plots, together with a substantial number of good livestock all offered a fine laboratory for students taking courses in Agronomy and Animal Husbandry. It is pertinent to mention here that the first experiments on the use of phosphate fertilizer were instituted at the West Central Experiment Station in 1915 and data secured from same during the ensuing years formed the basis for almost universal use of phosphate throughout the area of Western Minnesota. I would be remiss not to mention the most popular sheep and lamb feeding trials inaugurated by Mr. Jordan in the mid 20's and which now after 36 years continue to be rated "tops" among the most prominent sheep men of the United States. "Cross Breeding" as a means for improvement of swine is another. These programs and many others could now be cited as having played an important part in furthering the practical education of West Central students.

It was some time, however, before the results of the experimental work began to be recognized by the farmers of West Central Minnesota. It was a "New Deal" so far as they were concerned and they were rather reluctant about taking advantage of the work, or even coming into the Station to ascertain what was going on. Visitation on Field Days which were instituted to acquaint them with grain improvement, soils projects, weed control, and so forth, were poorly attended for several years. But a severe stem rust epidemic in the late 20's posed a threat to the entire small grain program. So the development and release of disease resistant strains of grain, particularly stem rust resistant wheat, by the University of Minnesota Experiment Stations was a great incentive for growers not only to secure some of the seed but also to see and learn more of other projects that were being conducted at the West Central Experiment Station. From this time, interest increased rapidly and there was no longer the question of having a good crowd at these days, but how to handle them in a most efficient manner. Attendance-wise, perhaps the highlight of all "field days" was the one held in 1920 at which a record-breaking crowd estimated at between 8000-9000 people overflowed the campus and the surrounding areas. Possibly the lure of a free barbecued dinner which had been advertised, and the curiosity of those who had never seen this place were some factors influencing the crowd. All 17 counties of West Central Minnesota were well represented by large groups of people and the local personnel were sorely pressed to handle the various visitation groups. A baseball game featuring Graceville and Hancock and a band concert by Morris City band provided some side entertainment and many stayed for the alumni dance in the evening. An aftermath of the barbecue, not universally known, was the sudden illness of several people during the afternoon, seemingly acute indigestion with severe stomach pains. Whether this was caused by the barbecued beef or other sources was not exactly determined.

The "era of horses" might well be considered one of the significant periods in the history of the West Central Experiment Station, when tractors were few and most of the farm work was done by horse power. This was a period that started in 1927 with the acquisition of four purebred Percheron mares and which in 1943 saw no less than 33 of these animals plus 11 foals and two sires filling all available barn space. It created a situation that taxed the ingenuity of Oscar Beckstrom, the farm foreman, in supervising their care and training as well as disposing of animals that were considered sub-standard. Oscar's inherent love for horses and his skill in handling them made him an ideal man for the job. At its peak, this enterprise created a great amount of interest throughout the territory and horse fanciers from far and wide came to look them over, buyers as well as breeders. Beautifully matched teams made a striking appearance in the field and it was not unusual to see six well-matched animals hitched in tandem, moving heavy loads in and about the campus. They were also in demand for use in parades, county fairs, and similar celebrations. Show horses there were a-plenty but only one really attained fame in the show ring. "Myrtle," a very fine black mare was judged the Grand Champion three-year-old at the Minnesota State Fair in 1937. With increased farm mechanization during the early 40's, however, the need for draft horses declined rapidly and only a few horses remained, kept primarily for sentimental reasons, but even sentiment failed to halt the sale of the last team in 1952. For the first time in its history the West Central Experiment Station was without a horse. The "era" had ceased to exist.

Many other incidents could be mentioned that undoubtedly affected the everyday life of students or even played a significant part in shaping the history of the school, but it would be difficult to enumerate them all now. With the graduation of the 1963 Class, the West Central School of Agriculture will close its doors and cease to exist in its present form. However, it will close the books on fifty-three interesting and purposeful years to which hundreds of former students and graduates may well "look back" upon with a great deal of satisfaction and a host of pleasant memories.

STATION DAY BARBEQUE

Introduction to: "The Rug of the Decades"

The making of rugs has been an activity of interest to men and women from time immemorial. Whether they be the intricate woolen masterpieces of the East or the woven, hooked, or crocheted rugs that are a part of every household, rugs are a necessary and often beautiful accessory in our homes.

The utilization by thrifty artisans of extra pieces of fabrics, of yarns, of parts of worn-out garments and hand-me-downs brought to mind the events and people of the past. It was not only the person who made the rug who remembered, but also all who would look and listen to the story.

As we have read and re-read the many detailed and carefully compiled recollections you have sent us, we have vividly re-lived with you the past fifty-three years. We thank you for the gift of your time and the insight you have contributed to the history of this institution.

If we have taken what you have so generously given and snipped a paragraph to include in combination with that of another; or if we have re-phrased your idea and included it out of context, we hope you will understand our reason for doing this. Quite simply: There are so many memories that all of us share in common. We have tried to avoid too much repetition.

What we have woven together reminds us of the familiar hit-and-miss pattern of the rag-rug runners mothers use to protect the new rug or the freshly scrubbed kitchen floor. We hope you will find your story in the long and colorful runner that covers the path from the door marked 1910 to the one marked 1963.

We take pride and pleasure in recognizing below those who have contributed the material for this "Rug of the Decades." We wrote originally to the members of the committees for each decade who had worked to produce the scenes for the pageant "From Indian School to College" in 1960. In many cases these letters led to "a chain reaction" involving others.

We speak, not only for ourselves, but for all our readers when we say: "The recollections you have so thoughtfully selected and carefully recorded have made this history possible. We thank you."

The Teens

Historically, a period of time spanning over fifty years, may seem to be a relatively short period; but when considered as a part of an individual life time, or of an institution such as W.C.S.A., it assumes a significantly different aspect.

In retrospect, concerning the West Central School, one of the first things that comes to mind is to note the many changes that have taken place in any given period, or from one decade to another. Since change is a "law of progress", we come to the conclusion that if progress is commensurate with the changes that have come about, happily, there must have been a great deal of progress made in the life and growth of West Central.

Throughout this period of time we also note a rapidly changing scene in our community, state and national life, which inevitably affects the life of each one of us as individuals. We have witnessed tremendous advances in scientific developments, communications, transportation facilities, mechanized power replacing horsepower in farming operations, and rural electrification progressively extended into practically all areas of our country. This continued growth, development and application of scientific knowledge in all phases of agriculture is nothing short of fantastic. West Central has played a most significant part in this revolutionary process. The sum total reflects remarkable progress in the conquest of all the limiting factors of "rural isolation" from pioneer days up to the present time.

West Central has served a special purpose in providing a wonderful educational opportunity for eighth grade graduates of the rural areas desiring a secondary education, when the facilities of local high schools were extremely limited and inadequate to meet the needs of the rural population.

Dormitory life had many interesting and varied experiences, though not without some occasional problems. Students learning to live together, assuming group responsibilities; developing intellectual, spiritual, social, and manual skills in preparation for adult life as responsible American citizens. While efforts toward these goals varied considerably, as did results, there is no question but that each individual derived an immeasurable amount of good training and experience in the process, to utilize as a foundation for future living - - -

An incident related by R. W. Bennett, Class of 1917

"During the winter of 1917, two of us decided to visit our friend, a fellow student, who worked in the dairy barn. His instructions were 'never open the gate of a bull's pen before first tying the bull'. Since the two-year old Shorthorn was exceptionally quiet, this order had often been disregarded; this day he left his pen and was free in the barn.

As we entered, George was just getting him back. The evidence was plain, he had mated with Professor Jordan's most prized two-year old Holstein heifer. George was frantic, almost in tears. 'What shall I do when Jordan finds this out. I'll lose my job and without work, I'll have to leave school.'

Our hasty conference reminded us that this heifer should be reported during her first heat period. She was duly reported. Later that day Professor Jordan was present when she was properly mated with his best Holstein bull.

In due season the calf appeared, a beautiful creature with the five white points required on a purebred Holstein, but, the color was red and white. Thus, it was just another veal. Phil was not dismayed, for, in discussing 'Types and Breeds', the red and white Holsteins of Europe were always mentioned and now he had a throw back from this strain.

For many years thereafter, this red and white calf was mentioned in his Types and Breeds classes. In 1934 when he was judge at the Douglas County Fair, I asked Mr. Jordan whether he still mentioned in his classes the red and white Holstein born in 1917 at the State. 'If I happen to think of it,' was his reply. Then we shared a hearty laugh over the full report of the incident and our handling of what might be called a 'delicate' situation."

TO BEGIN WITH:

- - - The buildings seemed quite "modern" to the students, for then, as now, all had inside plumbing, furnace heat, and electric lights.

- - - Music Hall of today was the Agronomy Building and carpenter shop of the teens. Both Music Hall and Home Ec. served temporarily as girls' dormitories.

- - - The Square as we know it today was not in existence and the trees were few, small, and far between.

- - - The large white frame building on what is now the Square housed the school Dining Hall, kitchen and offices on first floor, dormitory rooms for the boys and the farm help on the upper floors.

- - - The dormitories known as The Girls' Dorm and Spooner were the first new buildings to be erected by the State of Minnesota. The Engineering Building followed in 1917.

- - - Emphasis on the practical and vocational rather than the academic subjects was noticeable in the early curriculum. The regular course required for a diploma could be completed in three years of six months each. It was customary for students who wished to have a high school diploma to attend high school for one year after graduating from WCSA. Instruction in subjects required for college entrance was added later.

- - - Suggestion from the instructor in Forge-Shop to the class in 1915: "If you must chew tobacco while working in this class, be sure you spit in the fire."

- - - Rivalry between the High School and West Central had its origin in the rivalry that existed between Morris High and the Indian School. In time, the practice of scheduling games between the two schools was discontinued by mutual agreement.

- - - Because of transportation inconveniences of that time and our school week being in session from Tuesday through Saturday, the Thanksgiving Holiday was observed at school. We had a turkey dinner and all the trimmings.

- - - Field Day in the fall was a big event and marked the end of Freshman Initiation. Many athletic contests were scheduled including a football game between freshmen and juniors with the two classes vying for the most points.

- - - Baccalaureate services and Commencement exercises during the early years were much like those of today. The tradition of the Senior Tea was established with the first class.

- - - The class colors of the Class of 1912 were Nile green and white. Ordering pennants in class colors became a tradition that continued until the late twenties. Every class presented the school with a large pennant in the class colors.

- - - There was no attempt to present a class play, nor to go on a class trip. There is no record of class advisers for the early classes.

- - - On the second floor of Home Ec., the junior girls prepared and served a banquet for the faculty and the five V.I.P.'s — The Class of 1912. The menu included creamed chicken served in pastry cups (timbales) made by the girls.

- - - A sports program was set up early. Browns Valley, Chokio and Graceville were among our early rivals.

- - - In 1918, WCSA defeated Graceville by the unforgettable score 91-0.

- - - Even though entrance requirements stipulated only an eighth grade certificate, ages of freshman students ranged between 16 and 21 years.

- - - World War I cut down the attendance of both boys and girls. During that time the flu epidemic caused the school first to be quarantined, then closed for a few weeks. Three students died during this time.

- - - Military drill was included in the training of boys and uniforms were required to be worn. A former army captain conducted the drills for the boys.

- - - In these early years most of the janitor work was done by the students because many worked to help pay for their schooling. During the summer there were jobs available in the construction of the tunnels that carry steam pipes, electrical wiring, and water pipes between the buildings.

- - - Mr. J. A. Anderson brought his bride to the campus in the fall of 1916. That evening the student body saluted them with a charivari.

- - - Mr. Miller was the first coach of debate at the school. His teams took part in some intense contests with Crookston.

- - - Mary Wheaton (Mrs. Carl Krause) was the first librarian and also taught some classes in English.

- - - Miss Elizabeth Mott organized a mixed quartette and perhaps a girls' glee club.

- - - Mr. Bridgford's work with new varieties of grain in the experimental plots was of help and interest to farmers in the area. Horses were used almost exclusively for farm work during the teens.

- - - When Supt. Higbie announced his intention to leave the school to continue his work for a doctorate, Mr. P. E. Miller was named superintendent.

- - - A word of appreciation to the memory of Mrs. Ida Summers, housemother and caretaker of Spooner Hall: She understood her boys and loved them all.

"In my opinion the West Central School has made a wonderful contribution to this area of Minnesota. Personally, my education has been of great practical value to me and my family. Three of my children are also graduates of the school."

The Terrific Twenties

L. E. Hanson

In his message (Moccasin, 1926) to the class of 1926, P. E. Miller, Superintendent, commented on the great changes which had taken place in the United States during the first 25 years of this century, and stated, "The wonderful advancement made in the application of electricity to the welfare of society; the development of radio; the coming of the automobile; the improvement of our homes, living conditions and all the physical equipment of modern life have made the past century read like an amazing fairy tale."

Student Background

Conditions on most farms of West Central Minnesota during the "Roaring Twenties", however, were quite unlike a fairy tale because the developments of which Mr. Miller wrote had not yet reached most of the rural areas. Electric power did not reach any of the farms in our community during the 20's. I knew only one farmer in several townships who had electricity for lighting and he had installed a private system.

There was no piped water on most farms, no indoor plumbing and no central heating. The first radios appeared in the 20's, battery powered sets with which one could occasionally get fairly clear reception through earphones. In large families the children took turns to listen. Rural telephones that worked part of the time came on the scene. Their dependability seemed to vary with the intuitive skill of the part-time, apparently untrained repair man. Twin City daily newspapers were faithfully delivered by the rural route man, usually two days after they were printed. We did not read much because the daylight hours were generally spent working and kerosene lamps were quite unsatisfactory for extensive reading after dark.

Farm operations were primarily dependent on horse or mule power plus the muscles of the farmer and his family. The walking plow and cultivator had been made nearly obsolescent by plows and cultivators with a seat for the operator. Most farm machinery was designed for the use of 2 to 5 or 6 horses or their equivalent in mules. Four wheel tractors powered by gasoline, kerosene or fuel oil engines gradually replaced most of the steam engines previously used for threshing power, during this decade. As the decade progressed the application of tractor power to such jobs as plowing, discing and harrowing and to belt operations such as feed grinding increased. But even by the end of the decade most farms in the area did not have tractors. During this period a topic frequently debated, with sometimes heated fervor, was the question of whether the tractor could ever displace the horse on the farm.

The Model T Ford was developed in the previous decade and began to appear in numbers in our community in the early 20's. This remarkable automobile was clearly the first choice of most farmers during this period, though many other kinds of automobiles were available. The success of the Model T was no doubt due to the fact that one did not need to be a skilled mechanic to keep it going and it was well adapted to the trails which were labeled roads in that era. Antifreeze was not available until methyl-alcohol was introduced for that purpose about the middle of the decade. Before antifreeze became available many cars were made ready for winter by draining the radiator and placing blocks under the axles to take the weight off the tires. In spring the car was returned to use. For those who insisted on driving all winter draining the radiator was a routine chore every night and sometimes oftener if the car was not kept running.

This was the era too when tires were of such construction that most car owners carried two spare tires, tire tools, tire pump and tube repair kits. But the tire manufacturers were working hard and early in the decade a mail order company began advertising a tire guaranteed for 5000 miles. The guarantee did not apply to road hazard damage such as rocks left in the road by the man who dragged the dirt road to smooth out the ruts after each rain.

Trucks were a relative rarity the first half of the decade and most livestock and grain were hauled to market in the nearest town with wagons and horses. It was often a cold trip during the winter, but not unbearable because one could always walk alongside the wagon to keep warm, instead of riding.

Farming as done in those days was relatively simple. A young man could work as a hired hand for a few years and if he was frugal he could save $300-$400 with which to buy a team and a few used implements. He could borrow a few items which he could not buy, rent some land and start farming. And, many did.

The agricultural extension service and 4-H club work were in their infancy. Little was known about human or livestock nutrition and most did not concern themselves about it. The only fertilizer used consisted of whatever barnyard manure was available. There was no agricultural chemical industry, though "paris green" was available for controlling potato beetles and several concoctions were available for treating sheep, swine and poultry for internal parasites.

Tuberculosis took several lives in our community and when the state-wide eradication program began in the early 20's it was found that many cattle herds had high proportions of infected animals. Diphtheria and other infectious diseases also snuffed out many young lives. There were no wonder drugs and no well-developed vaccination programs, except for smallpox.

By today's standards, life on the farm in the 20's was primitive and tough. Yet there were many compensations and we probably had as much fun as youngsters do today. Family ties were very close and these generally included all relatives in the area. The world seemed to move at a much slower pace and there was always time for neighborly visits and assistance to neighbors when necessary. Church socials and neighborhood parties were always enjoyable because they were infrequent enough to prevent boredom. Money was not an important factor in our entertainment because most of us had very little.

The farm depression began in the early 20's in western Minnesota, but there was mental compensation in the fact that the war that was to end all wars among nations, World War I, had been fought and "won". This then was the sort of environment in which many of us grew to high school age. We were quite unsophisticated and many of us had never been more than 25 miles from home before we came to Morris.

The Class of 1928

There were 96 of us enrolled as freshmen in the fall of 1925 and 52 more entered during the second semester. We were a varied group, ranging in age from about 13 to approximately 20 years. Boys outnumbered the girls about 2:1. In spite of the differences in age and size our class was a congenial group and it was not long until we were good friends.

Why did we come to West Central? Most of the boys were needed at home to finish the harvest and plowing in the fall and to assist with the seeding in the spring. The 6-month October to March school year interfered less with this need than did the 9-month year of most high schools. Furthermore, many high schools did not offer training in vocational agriculture at that time and thus did not appeal to those of us who planned to become farmers. Why did the girls choose to attend West Central? Perhaps the training offered in homemaking skills was a major factor. At any rate they came and the school atmosphere was greatly brightened by their presence.

Being perpetually short of funds, my brother (Earle) and I got a job washing the evening meal dishes in the Dining Hall. Thus we enjoyed the privilege of getting to know Miss Hinson, Director, and all the fine ladies who prepared the food. This job included only one disagreeable task, cleaning the huge pots and pans. Spanish rice was the worst when cooked in the huge black pans — I have not cared for it since. But the cooks made up for it in special ways with pastry handouts, lefse in season, etc. We also worked for Mr. Jordan, in the barns, one year and thus got acquainted with the herdsman and others who cared for the livestock. It was not pleasant to get up at 5 a.m. to throw down silage during the cold and dark of winter, but the wonderful breakfasts prepared by the farmhouse cooks made it worthwhile.

Through our jobs and classes we had more opportunity than most students to get acquainted with most of the people who worked at West Central, civil service as well as teaching staff. We did not encounter a single one who was not a credit to the School. It is my judgment, in retrospect, that this is a major reason for the remarkable record of effectiveness of West Central. Dedicated, competent people, working toward defined educational objectives - - -

One of the outstanding characteristics of the entire teaching staff at Morris, and one which I will never forget, was the patient, friendly and helpful attitude toward the students. None ever hesitated to take time to answer a question in a kindly manner, no matter how absurd the question. They were always ready to assist in the solution of problems, personal or educational.

Glimpses Down Memory's Lane

I took a trip this afternoon down Memory's Lane. It was faster than our Jet Age because in a manner of minutes — I re-lived the four years of my life that I spent at W.C.S.A. It was a pleasant trip as most of my random thoughts were happy ones. Some of the big tragedies of thirty-odd years ago had become amusing and some were downright hilarious. I recommend this backward excursion to all. - - - My thoughts of the early twenties when my brothers attended school bring to mind how often history repeats itself. The ratted-frizzed hairdos of today make me think of the style of 1922. Then the young ladies combed their hair in a pompadour and ratted the sides making a bun over each ear. The very pointed toes on shoes were also popular then.

- - - I was one of the bobbed hair girls. Our hair was short, our skirts were short (also popular now), and we rolled our stockings to our knees. I am sure my rheumatism twinges now come from freezing my knees so often on our walks downtown. No slacks in those days.

- - - Our school days were Tuesday through Saturday and we liked that. At that age, you always enjoy being different, I guess. I lived less than thirty miles from Morris, so I went home about once a month or less. We looked forward to our Saturday night parties and dances as the highlight of the week. We had our own school dance orchestra and we really appreciated it. We fox-trotted, waltzed, and charlestoned "like mad" to many hit songs which have been popular off and on since then. My daughters have often been surprised when they have come home with a keen "new" song to find out that Mom had sung it years before.

- - - Debate and declam were very important extra curricular activities in our school days. Mr. Long was our coach and we were good. We were worthy opponents and won many honors in this field.

- - - The dashing Romeo who had a car on campus those days invariably was driving a Model T Ford. On cold days, it took gallons of hot water in the radiator, lots of cranking and pushing, but they finally started. Not many fellows were lucky enough to have one.

- - - Model T Fords, open style, as well as a number of other makes of touring type (some not so compact) cars, were the common means of transportation. A closed car with glass windows was the ultimate status symbol. Some even had six cylinders! Special extra optional features of cars coming into the picture were de-mountable tire rims, balloon type tires, four wheel mechanical brakes, "Karry-keen" box type trunk, hinged at the bottom so that its capacity was doubled when open. Worked fine for carrying luggage for a careful of students week-ending at home. It served as a predecessor to the small sized pick-up trucks for hauling farm products, cream cans, and egg cases to market.

- - - Junior-Senior Banquet — Every year the junior class planned a banquet to honor the seniors. This was probably the major social event of the year. Special efforts were made not only to decorate the dining area but also the dancing area as well. The dinner served was always a bit special, music and other entertainment were provided during and after the meal, short speeches were made by representatives of both classes, after which the remainder of the evening was spent dancing. This event was held during Commencement week and thus, for the seniors especially, it held special significance — a mixture of slight sadness as well as delight was part of the atmosphere on these occasions.

- - - An experiment was begun in 1928-29 when the Senior girls had a real live baby to take care of in the Home Management House. The baby was about eleven months old when she came to Morris and we loved her dearly while she was in our care. I have often wondered where she is living now.

- - - Romance is always prevalent in a coeducational institution. Many of the young men and women attending W.C.S.A. later married, raised their families and sent their children back there to school. Not only the students were romantically inclined I well remember when Ted Long used to go calling on that striking Home Ec. teacher — Tone Halvorson — and take her for rides in his Model T Coupe. He later convinced her that she should become Mrs. Long and live happily with him in a little house near the campus in Morris.

- - - In contrast to today's modern living conditions, we may mention some items common to student life on the campus in the roaring twenties.

- - - Part-time employment for needy students paid $6.00 for 10 to 12 hours of work per week. Board and room — $21.00 per month.

- - - Silent movies, in down-town theatres, with Miss Helen Swan providing piano accompaniment in proper timing.

- - - Radio sets, some with individual ear phones, were almost a luxury, and a "squeaky" one at that. Television was a very remotely heard of possibility, to say nothing of color TV.

- - - After one of the basketball games, one of the big "wheels" on the campus had invited his sister to visit his room in Senior Hall. One of the fellows on the team, after showering in the basement, was on his way to his room when he got into a towel fight with some of the other fellows. He made a strategic retreat into the "wheel's" room. His towel was being used as an offensive weapon instead of the usual use while traveling the halls. Because he was watching his opponent, he was well into the room before he realized there were women present. I don't know which was the reddest — his face or where he had been snapped by his opponent's towel.

- - - Most of the students stayed over the week-end. Monday was house-cleaning day (the only day some beds got made). In the winter, on Sunday and Monday afternoons, decks of cards came out, Vic Eastman was the undisputed whist champion of Senior Hall.

- - - The way to get down-town was by foot power, and because of this some of the food from the dining hall would be "liberated" for bed-time snacks. Periodically, the matron of the dining hall, when the supply of dishes began to get low, would make a raid on the dormitories to replenish her supply.

- - - After taking typing, my brother and I received a typewriter as a gift. We took this back to school with us and we would type our work, as well as for others on a fee basis. As far as I know, this was one of the first typewriters in use in the dormitories.

- - - In 1933, I asked Mr. Bridgford whom to contact to get information and supplies to produce hybrid seed corn. He directed me to the proper source at University Farm, St. Paul. This was the beginning of our production of hybrid seed corn and other pure seeds. After that, Mr. Bridgford called at the farm periodically to inspect and direct our work. The first thing we demanded before we would let him into the seed house was to hear his latest story. As a result of these contacts, we have always felt very close to Roy and W.C.S.A.

- - - Mr. Rolfe's British accent; the incredible speed with which he traveled the stairs from first to third floors when the third floor got a bit noisy; his defense of a freshman's right to ask questions.

- - - How scared some of us (freshmen) were the night we were "initiated" by the juniors.

- - - Mr. Long's skits and readings at various affairs and his versatility in the jazz band; his debate teams; his instruction in literature, especially that pertaining to Chaucer.

- - - Chaucer's work read aloud in class with Scandinavian accents applied by some students.

- - - Mr. Bridgford's snappy approach in the lecture room; his enthusiasm for all things and especially those pertaining to agronomy. Mr. Edson's dedication to the poultry enterprise; Mr. Jordan's variety of skills in the field of animal husbandry; and the joint delight of Bridgford and Jordan the year that both the livestock and grain judging teams placed first at the Red River Valley Winter Show at Crookston.

- - - Mr. Felt's patience with those of us who seemed unable to do good work in carpentry.

- - - Mr. Prickett's beautiful singing; Mr. Sorflaten's success in producing pleasant music through the skillful use of student voices in the various singing groups; and his versatility with several musical instruments. Mr. Anderson's kindly patience with would-be violinists.

- - - The tremendous student enthusiasm at football and basketball games; Ella Erickson and Rose Winter leading the cheering sections; Perry, Sather and Apmann running over the opposition; Gilyard and his tremendous punting ability; the exceptional natural ability of Charlie Buckeye in both football and basketball; the way Oscarson covered the whole floor in basketball; the "baseball scores" often found in basketball of that era; the aggressive play of some of the girls' basketball teams; and the bloomer uniforms of the girls.

- - - Mischief in the dormitories such as bed tipping; water, crackers or ice placed between sheets; the Norwegian whist games and the unbelievable skill of a small Irishman (Pat O'Leary, Danvers) to win at that game; Hugo Walz and his banjo; the impeccable sartorial splendor of "Sheik" Zimmerman and several others.

- - - The weekly convocations in the chapel attended by all students; the faint aroma of a skunk noted at one of these meetings after Christmas vacation — a student had gone hunting during the vacation period.

- - - The frequent dances which everyone seemed to enjoy — even some of us who only watched; the obvious delight which many showed in dancing the newest dance — the Charleston; Johnny Getchell dancing in knee-pants; campus romances which increased every spring.

"I have always felt a great pride in my school; two of my children have graduated from there and now I have a son attending the University there. May "Our School" continue to serve our community as a great educational center. Farewell W.C.S.A."

FIRST SUPERINTENDENT'S RESIDENCE

The Thirsty Thirties

Our Memories Pass in Review:

When we re-live these "good old days" of the early 1930's, some of the conditions appear like a fairy tale. In fact, our children feel that perhaps some of the stories are fairy tales. It may be that as we grow older our memories are not as sharp and accurate as they might be and there is a danger of "coloring the facts".

- - - The "Thirties" were also called the "depression years". When we speak of the good old days, which were for us the 1930's, we might well ask ourselves "What's good about them?" This is a good question. The years of 1933 and 1934 were so dry very little hay was harvested to say nothing of the very meager crop yields. In fact, in western Minnesota most of the grain fields were pastured. The younger members of the family spent most of the days herding cattle on roadsides, fence-lines, ditch banks, or any other place where there might be a few blades of grass. Russian thistles, in a green stage, were cut, stacked and fed as hay. Small pigs up to 60 pounds were sold for about 50 cents each. Buyers who were able to buy feed out of the state and purchase these pigs at a low price were able to capitalize on the conditions.

- - - In a sense those of us attending school did not feel the full impact of these conditions. True, we did not have any money but we were busy, had the counsel and guidance of good teachers, and developed many and enduring friendships. These human values and the resulting enrichment of the lives of the students stands out in my mind as the main accomplishment of these years in school.

- - - I shall always have a great admiration for the dedicated staff members and the genuine interest in students they displayed. This interest did not end when the student left school but continued all through the years. This devoted interest undoubtedly has molded the lives of many into more useful citizens.

- - - The extra curricular activities such as athletics, judging teams, debates, class plays, and numerous other special events were leisure time pleasures that I shall always cherish. It was my fortune to attend the West Central School during a period of both drouth and depression. I feel this fact may have brought about a deeper appreciation of all these activities.

- - - The many experienced football and basketball players (many of them belonging to the class called "specials") made for some outstanding teams. There were many hard-played games and we had a lot of fun. Three football games stand out for me. One was a game at the Crookston Ag. School when we played in a pouring rain on a brand new field. If you can realize what this yellow gumbo was like when mixed with rain, you can visualize the mud-caked players. One other game to remember was one played at the Grand Rapids Ag. School in a blinding snow storm. It was not fit for man nor beast but the game went on. The other game I particularly remember was one played against Grand Rapids in Morris. Grand Rapids had an outstanding team. They were big and fast and had beaten Crookston handily but WE WON!

- - - Swimming as a sport was fun even if it raised havoc with hairdos and the faded blue swim suits did nothing for the figure.

- - - Music was a vital part of campus life all through the dusty, dark days of the depression. Never to be forgotten is the Song Bird of the 30's. How her listeners thrilled as she sang. Our own Ruth Nelson Tomte.

- - - Class plays were always planned with one evening for the public but sometimes the weather in the form of a snowstorm did not cooperate so no public was there.

- - - What excitement when a movie screen and projector was installed in the old auditorium. The first film shown was a Will Rogers production "David Harum". For days after the showing students and faculty could be heard singing, "Ta ra rah boom de ay!"

- - - The NYA (National Youth Administration) provided a plan for students to earn money while attending school. This gave an opportunity for many to continue school who otherwise could not have done so. So many students worked that those who didn't were considered odd.

- - - In the classroom or in the dormitory or wherever one might be on the campus, it seemed we were always challenged to put forth our best efforts.

- - - In the first years of the 30's, classes started at 8:00 a.m. on Tuesday mornings and continued until 4:15 on Saturday. Everyone was free until 7:00 p.m. Monday when Study Hours resumed.

- - - My classes in Home Nursing had a part in convincing me to decide to enter the nursing profession.

- - - Floriculture was interesting and fascinating to me. Visits to the greenhouse created a deeper understanding of the life of plants and an appreciation of their beauty.

- - - The senior girls faced the problem of choosing the pattern, material and color of their graduation gowns. A basic pattern was chosen but girls were allowed to make alterations according to their choice. In spite of the variety of desires among the girls in the classes, a unanimous decision was reached with no hard feelings. Perhaps the ability to comply came of necessity, or from having learned to give in because of the living together. No doubt a great deal of credit should be given to the wise management by Miss Halvorson.

- - - Cost of graduation dresses depended upon what a girl could afford. A dress of good quality cost less than $2.00; of better quality less than $3.50; of the best quality less than $5.30. How proud everyone was when two weeks before graduation the dresses were displayed in the windows of Knowles Store. No girl in cap and gown will ever know the same joy, pride, and satisfaction of walking across the stage for her diploma that the girls in the 30's knew as they wore their own creations.

- - - Living as a family with seven classmates, a small child, and a supervisor in the Home Management House for eight weeks gave senior girls the opportunity to assume the responsibility of carrying out some of the duties of a homemaker.

- - - Home Economics — with special stress on the economics — was taught. Make-overs were a very necessary part of the sewing course.

- - - Boys, too, learned to put great emphasis on economics. Training in welding, mechanics, wood work, butchering, meat care, and curing were necessary and popular courses.

- - - Kids now are horrified at the idea of working for as little as we did, but they'd be pretty surprised to see how much could be purchased with a few dimes and quarters. I bought all my school supplies with my earnings plus an occasional pair of 39 cent cotton stockings and a 49 cent hat.

- - - A weekly allowance of twenty-five cents resulted in "the big question": take a girl to a "Take a Chance" show on Wednesday night and share a bag of popcorn with the quarter or go alone and have fifteen cents for a whole pint of ice cream!

- - - A class known as "Specials" became a part of our school. These students were high school graduates who took courses in business, agriculture or home economics.

- - - The youngest member of our freshman class was 14 and the oldest 21. The rest of the students ranged in between except for one man who was past 30. Many young people had to bide their time at home until money was available for schooling.

- - - A familiar sound on Saturdays was the squeak of the cistern pump. This piece of luxury was located north of the Girls' Dorm and offered rain water for shampoos — Oh! sad was the day when the cistern "went dry". Water was heated on gas burners in the laundry where girls washed their own clothes by hand and often washed, ironed and mended for some of the boys.

- - - Dormitory life brought many pleasant experiences. We were given an opportunity to exercise our spiritual needs. Before leaving for our classes every morning, a quiet time was set aside for the girls to join in a period of devotional singing and reading.

- - - An epidemic of mumps and measles meant confinement in the Health Service. Many who were not very sick came up with schemes for entertaining themselves as well as fellow students. "Bed rolling" as well as "communication systems" were frequently resorted to.

- - - My fourth year was one of the happiest years of all four, but it was also a sad one. Four students died that year. It was a sobering experience, not only to me, but to the whole school.

- - - The faculty showed a deep concern for our physical well-being by their continual check as to whether we were wearing our boots and overshoes.

- - - Mr. Miller had a horror of girls wearing "borrowed overalls" to protect themselves from the elements. The arrival of "snow pants" for girls was quite an innovation to keep a girl's legs warm and make her look smart even if the boys protested and howled at their appearance.

- - - The new home was built for our superintendent. Mr. Miller moved to St. Paul so Mr. Fenske was the first to occupy it.

- - - I'd been on campus a week or so when I was asked to baby sit with one of the faculty member's children when he and his wife wanted some time off. For an entire Monday afternoon (we had classes Saturday with Mondays off then, I earned 25 cents. An evening's baby sitting brought 10 cents except for the times I'd wash the supper dishes, then I'd get 15 cents.

- - - The children of the Rolfes, Fenskes, and Pricketts, in the dormitories, were subjected to plenty of teasing as well as loving, tender care from the boys. Margaret Ann and Marilyn Fenske ruled as princesses of Senior Hall. Margaret Ann enjoyed the longest reign and could manage most of the boys in the building. She was always a source of amusement and joy, especially when she klumped down the halls wearing her mother's shoes and hat. She solemnly announced "I'm Mrs. Hack-'n-Sack." What a day of joy when Ted Fenske, Jr. arrived! Russell and Gordon Prickett were in for their share of love too.

- - - What a thrill it was when the lunch room was opened and students could have extra snacks and "dates". The short time between supper and study hours were especially valuable for the restricted students. Many romances could be observed at this time of day, especially on warm evenings. When the school term neared the close, "Armstrong Heaters" popped up all over the campus.

- - - Sunday breakfasts at 8 o'clock were followed by a YWCA service for girls and Mr. Edson's Bible studies for boys. Students either walked down to church or people from town were kind enough to come out to school and pick up students.

- - - Sunday dinners were very special, not only because of the delicious food but because seating arrangements could be ignored. Box lunches were passed out for supper.

- - - In spite of hard times, financially speaking, there was much for which to be thankful. Thanksgiving Day was a time of special festivities. Most of the students were employed on the campus, and classes were held on Saturday; therefore, only one day of vacation. At dawn on Thanksgiving morning, girls' voices could be heard, as Y.W.C.A. girls, dressed as Priscillas, marched through the dormitory halls singing "For the Beauty of the Earth." After breakfast everyone walked down to worship and give thanks in the church of his choice. Upon our return to campus, Thanksgiving dinner was ready.

- - - In spite of the drought, grasshoppers, Russian thistle, dust storms, and a depression, the days spent at the West Central School of Agriculture in Morris during the "Thirties" are still known to many of us as "the good old days".

- - - As the decade, remembered as the "dirty thirties", skipped away into history, war clouds were gathering in many parts of the world. A feeling of uneasiness stirred in every heart and could be felt everywhere. Everyone wondered — "Will we?" Then the prayer we often used on our campus became more meaningful than ever before "May the Lord watch between Thee and me, while we are absent one from another."

"LONG MAY IT WAVE . . ."

The Fitful Forties

"Changes must take place as years go by, but in recalling our days at W.C.S.A., today's boys and girls of high school age will not have the opportunity we had. But progress is progress! This way we have a college closer at hand for our boy and girl.

"I don't think there is one of us that has forgotten Mr. Edson's laugh. He had a way of making the most difficult task a pleasure. Some of us who were away from home for the first time in our lives were pretty homesick but when we heard Mr. Edson's laugh, our troubles were forgotten. His life was short, but memories of him will live forever."

- - - Of course there are many things that would very appropriately fit into a resume of the high points of the "Fitful Forties." Without a doubt one of the highest, temperature-wise, would have been the Scarlet Fever epidemic which put the West Central School students on a basis similar to a leper colony.

- - - The Health Service was filled to capacity. Junior Girls' Dorm was used as an emergency hospital. The entire student body was restricted to the campus. When something like this happens, there is always someone who becomes the "Most Popular Man on Campus." In this case the man was Virgil Dwinell who was the official purchasing agent for all quaranteened students and faculty.

- - - All mail sent out from the campus was ironed — not to make it appear neat — but to sterilize it.
- - - The fall of 1940 marked the beginning of several new activities: This was the first year of Fall Corn Field Day.

- - - The first Student Council was formed. Ground School was started for Civilian Pilot training. This ground school was later to be incorporated into a more complete flight training program.

- - - Another first was Cross Country in which the West Central School was later to win more than its share of championships. Mr. Edson was the first coach.

- - - Students in 1940 had many occasions for rejoicing after victorious football games. The high point of the season was the victory over Crookston in which Rolf Skrien intercepted a Crookston pass in the end zone and ran 100 yards for the touchdown. The final score was Morris 14, Crookston 6. This was the first defeat for Crookston on their home field since 1928.

- - - February 24, 1941, students, staff and alumni were saddened by the sudden death of Earl Pederson, who had been a staff member for three years.

- - - In the fall of 1941, students were witnesses to the last Corn Husking Contest . . . another in a long series of changes brought about by mechanization.

- - - Monday, December 8, 1941, Mr. Fenske made the announcement in assembly that the Japanese had attacked Pearl Harbor and that the United States of America was now at war with Japan. Mr. Fenske and most of the student body were in tears.

- - - It was in the spring of 1942 that Congressman H. Carl Anderson presented a new American Flag to our school. This flag had flown over the Capitol building in Washington, D. C. At an outdoor assembly program presided over by Wesley Magnuson, president of the Student Council, the flag was raised to the top of the flag pole.

- - - In September, 1942, the "School News" carried the "shocking" announcement that board would have to go up. The price of room was to remain at $5.00 a month, but board would go from $14.00 to $15.00. To add to the insult of rising prices, no longer was it possible to sit down and eat family style. The cafeteria system was here to stay.

- - - The war also brought other changes. Remember the ration books? Mr. Volden had the task of collecting ration books in addition to money. Gasoline, of course, was rationed and in compliance with this came the regulation that no students could have cars at school.

- - - Adding to the military atmosphere around campus was the Civilian Pilot Training Program, in which Army Corps members were trained. Fenske, Heine, Bridgford and "Slim" Hokanson took part in the training of these men.

- - - In our second year there were more drastic changes. The armed forces reduced the Special Class to mostly girls. The Freshman Class, starting in '42 were younger, and I would say the average age of the entire school was lowered considerably. With this age drop and the shortage of help and teachers, it became necessary to introduce some changes. A study hall was set up in the library. This acted as an incentive because one could stay out of it if one maintained a certain average.

- - - Even with a high enrollment the football record of the Aggies left something to be desired. During the 1942 and 1943 seasons not a single game was won, but that may not be too bad since in 1943 Crookston was the only team played. In 1944 the record was 1 out of 3.

- - - The bright spot of the fall sports season was again Cross Country. With the artistic ability of Alan Moeller as captain of the team, a new trophy was designed. "Cleo" was the name finally decided on.

- - - In 1943, John Anderson had advice for everyone raising Victory Gardens. In an article in the "School News" emphasizing the importance of food, Mr. Anderson wrote: "The greatest single weapon in this war for freedom is food. Hitler knew this, so he plunged into the Ukraine. To help keep the Russian armies in the fight, we are sending them food."

- - - In 1943, the Moccasin went G. I. with a supplement being sent to former West Central Aggies then in the military service. About this period a flu epidemic hit the campus and filled the health service to overflowing. Additional wards were set up in the dorms. The library and several classes were suspended for the duration of the epidemic.

- - - The June Reunion of 1943 was cancelled with the following note: "Had there been a Reunion the date no doubt would have been Saturday, June 19. Instead of gathering on campus and having a good time, it might be well for all to put forth just a bit more effort on that day in the special job we have in helping to win the war."

- - - A letter from George Carpenter, who was in the service, expressed the thoughts of many servicemen. "The South Sea Islands are beautiful, too beautiful for words, but we are so used to it that it isn't appreciated as much as it could be. I believe right now the song 'White Christmas' explains my thoughts. It will probably have to wait for a while. There is a job to do. It will be done and done well."

- - - The Junior-Senior-Alumni dance in the spring of 1944 was truly a "private type of dance" with all guests registering before purchasing tickets.

- - - Largest freshman class to enroll was in 1944. At least this was considerably above any previous high. Rooms were not crowded, that is if you have no objection to taking turns sleeping. There were advantages though — classes were so crowded the faculty never looked closely enough at the papers handed in to even recognize carbon copies of work.

- - - September 2, 1945, marked the signing of the surrender with Japan. The first atomic bomb dropped on Hiroshima and the second on Nagasaki had no small part in ending the war. With the ending of the war there was, of course, a great deal of rejoicing.

- - - September 26, 1945, marked the beginning of another program which has continually grown in popularity. This was the date of the first Live-stock and Feeders' Day program which is now combined to be included with Corn and Soybean Day.

- - - The enrollment in the fall of '45 was just under 400 — not because of fewer applicants than the previous year, but rather because of a decision on the part of the administration to keep the enrollment below that of the previous year in order that the high standards of classroom instruction could be maintained.

- - - The Freshman-Junior field day inaugurated a new event which was known as a "Rooster Chase." The following is an account of this event: "Five boys from each class raced to the goal line while a well-grown, wary white Leghorn rooster was turned loose on the 50-yard line. At the whistle, the contest was on. Wet ground, plus the rooster's maneuverability, kept the crowd in suspense as to who would sideline."

- - - Armistice Day 1945 was observed with a program as follows: "In a solemn setting of ever-green branches and potted flowers backed by a large service flag, Stanley W. Power, Roseland, Minnesota, with 23 months overseas service in England, France, Belgium and Germany, and at present a student at the West Central School, placed a wreath on a cross in commemoration of the 20 boys and 1 girl who had made the supreme sacrifice for their country. While the names were read by T. S. Long of the West Central faculty, Sergeant Power stood at attention."

- - - In the spring of 1946 the West Central School Chorus, under the direction of Blossom Sorby, gave three concerts away from campus. This was the first time for quite a period of time that the chorus had gone on tour. The concerts were in Cyrus, Chokio and Donnelly.

- - - Summer of 1946 marked the first post-war Reunion with the service men and women as guests. War tales flew fast and furiously.

- - - The fall term of 1946 brought about several significant things. Board and room was starting on the ever-increasing spiral — $20.00 board; $6.50 room. 431 students were accepted in the advance registration in 1946. In this group were 14 servicemen and also a student from Norway, Christen Knagenhjelm.

- - - The most versatile man on campus — who had coached swimming, taught shop, locked doors, and many other jobs too numerous and varied to mention, finally was given a job he thought he would like but was probably more embarrassed than his students. Virg Dwinell taught Girls' Phy Ed.

- - - June 1947 was the completion of a long tour of duty, both as an instructor and maintenance man, of one of the most loved and respected faculty members, Julius Felt. "Boys, we learn by doing, and this carpentry shop is the next best place to the dining hall and the Girls' Dormitory," were familiar words in the shop. It seemed indeed a misfortune that Mr. Felt's death in October of 1947 should come so soon after his retirement.

- - - Among the faculty members who left the campus during the Forties were: Mr. Prickett, Mr. Fenske, Mr. Heine and Miss Soderberg.

- - - West Central's athletic program was characterized by a strong swimming team throughout the Forties. Participation in athletics dropped off during the war because many of the students had to work at home in the evenings and on weekends."

- - - Along with the changes in personnel, a major change was made in the course offerings of the engineering department. The forges were removed. No longer would it be possible to see the bright white sparks flying from a neophyte blacksmith's piece of white hot metal he was attempting to mold into a log chain. According to Mr. Rolfe, only carelessness should cause such sparks, but each student must have experienced trouble of this sort at least once or twice. Veterans-on-farm-training began in 1947 with L. K. Lindor and Francis Wingert as instructors.

- - - Key Club, a service organization sponsored by the Kiwanis Club, was organized and received its charter December 1, 1947.

- - - 1948 again was a banner year for activities around West Central — "Song Before Sleep" was the title of a book of poetry written by a staff member, Agnes Hovde. The swimming team, under Virg Dwinell's tutorship, retained the Conference championship.

- - - Homecoming of 1948 was viewed with mixed emotion. The bonfire and pep fest were successful but the 21 to 0 victory for Crookston meant that Ozzie went back to the North Country.

- - - Improvements were made on campus. The smokestack was repaired. A new ceiling was put in the auditorium . . . and new grass was planted on campus.

- - - The graduating class of 1949 was the first class to wear caps and gowns at graduation.

- - - In July 1949, the Morris School and Station lost a very capable and energetic individual. However, he left to take over added responsibilities of what is now perhaps the largest experiment station in the United States. Mr. Heine left to take over the Superintendent's job at the 1800 acre Rosemount Experiment Station.

- - - Mr. Heine's vacancy was ably filled by Mr. Leslie K. Lindor, who found out he had a big job cut out for him, when on the second day of the fall term of school, the Girls' Dorm burned. Mr. Lindor, of course, used all the resources available and through careful timing, managed to get advice on what to do about the dorm from Mr. Heine who returned to campus two days after the fire for the dedication of the Memorial platform.

- - - This platform was dedicated by Mr. Heine as a memorial to the men and women who served their country in World War II, the war which changed the course of life for so many people. Without question, this period of crisis had a great influence on the lives of students in attendance at West Central during the decade of 1940-1949, "The Fitful Forties."

- - - "I know I have the most pleasant memories possible; for these, W.C.S.A. has my everlasting gratitude."

- - - There are also these memories that stand out: those day-long snowball fights when entire dorms were laid siege, the water fights with fire hoses in the dorms, the days in Ag Hall when a fragrant aroma signaled that it was butchering day in the basement, the scuffed shins and sore ribs resulting from the orderly lines at the lunch room, the new bachelor faculty member on campus who captured all the girl students' attention, those enterprising students in the health service touching their thermometers to the radiators to give a slight fever that would obtain a release from classes for the day, and rumbles of clashes with the high school students that never materialized.

- - - From initiation to graduation, from lights on in the morning to the last soaked bed at night, the years spent at West Central were full of interesting incidents that I am sure have been repeated many times. The close association that comes with residing on campus has left us all with many fond memories. This was certainly "learning through living'."

WHEN DO WE EAT?

The Fabulous Fifties

From the Fabulous Fifties came recollections in both prose and verse. The latter comprises the script for their part of the Panoramic Pageant, "From Indian School to College," presented at the Reunion of 1960.

Hi Lites of the 50's

In the fall of '50, after the dormitory fire
All the girls arrived, eager to admire
The beautiful new furniture
That was to be in the dorm for sure.

They opened the door and much to their surprise
Two innerspring mattresses met their astonished eyes.
Big men's pajamas were the rage of the day -
And often at night we could hear someone say -
"Someone's shortsheeted my bed!
Just wait! I'll get her!" was said.

Three-year graduation was dissolved at this time.
Problems arose but were met with just fine.
Two years we gave the prom and each was a success,
Two years put out the Moccasins and did our very best.

Romance, of course, was high on the list
Many were the step warmers waiting to be kissed.
Whenever anyone came to Junior Girls' dorm
They almost tripped, getting through the swarm.

And not only the students were in love
But also Mr. Ted Nelson and his turtle dove.
And Lindor and Wempie walked down the aisle,
Seems as though it was really the style.

W.C.S.A. has been called a place to find a mate
And this surely has happened — it can't be just fate!

During this time, Ag Hall got an addition
And classes were held for those who would listen.

In the early 50's the Schottische was the dance we all knew —

And long ballerina skirts with Gibson girl blouses too.

A little later the bunny hop came
And I'm sure no dance has ever been the same.
As the skirts grew shorter, the dancing grew livelier —
And rock and roll music got wilder and jiveier.

The old Home Ec is a thing of the past
We surely hope the new one will last.

Nightly excursions were always a dare
And until 3 proctor points, who would care?
And then — being campussed was such a shame
Why, oh why, hadn't we kept our good name?!?

As we go down memory lane,
We find all the cars held fast with a chain
But look! . . . what do I see?
And — oh — who is hiding behind the tree —
None other than Mr. Wes Gray.
No doubt some boys had privileges taken away.

But on with the years we must go —
Mr. Edson, a wonderful friend we all know
Left us, but his memory will stay
The new Edson Hall is only one way.
Everyone remembers a man who was as kind
As ever in our days we'll find.

And now there is a white Stetson coming down the trail

It is Dean Rodney Briggs reading his mail.
It is addressed to him at U. of M., Morris
And there is where we leave with this chorus.

We all had a wonderful time at W.C.S.A.
And we hope the new college is here to stay.

Recollections

From Those Not Poetically Inclined:

- - - Who was most glad to have us go home week-ends — we, our parents, or our teachers?

- - - The record made by the Class of '54 in the wrestling team of that year which won the Conference Title with a first place in each and every weight class.

- - - The record made by the Cross Country Team at the Conference Meet in the fall of 1954. The team consisted almost entirely of members of the Class of '56 who were the first five across the finish line at Crookston that cold and blustery day.

- - - The effort the girls made for a few days before the scheduled Home Project visit to make it look like we had been busy for weeks. Did we fool anybody?

- - - The fall of Mrs. Harriet Johnson over the footlights during a black-out scene in our Junior Class Play —.

- - - The basketball trips, particularly to Crookston, Grand Rapids and Brookings. The chance to see the iron mines while at Grand Rapids, and the water fights at the hotel in Brookings will long be remembered.

- - - The dismay of many a timid freshman who began his first date with a shy inquiry at the desk only to hear her name echoing and re-echoing as well-meaning friends informed her of his arrival.

- - - The class that was graduated from the third year in 1950 and from the fourth year in 1951 was responsible for editing the Moccasin for two years in succession. Two different groups of students were elected to carry this responsibility.

- - - Likewise, the class that was graduated from the third year in 1951 and from the fourth year in 1952 was responsible for the planning and management of two Junior Proms to honor the graduating seniors.

- - - The class that graduated in 1953 has the distinction of being the first class to enroll knowing they would be required to fulfill the requirements for a four year course before receiving a diploma.

- - - The wild stampede to the Dining Hall every Monday, Wednesday and Friday after assembly was dismissed. These stampeding days were later reduced to Thursdays and Fridays.

- - - For most, thoughts of bygone days at West Central will not often be of an academic nature, but those who have continued their education have no doubt found their preparation entirely adequate. The mental discipline obtained through our longer days and greater numbers of courses has been found of great value in higher academic environments.

- - - Progress may have removed West Central from her role in the secondary education of Minnesota's youth, but neither progress nor time can remove her from a role in the hearts and memories of all former students.

Thoughts

Memories can be happy thoughts

They can make me laugh or cry.

It doesn't take much — just a picture or word
To bring back tender thoughts.

On October second, we went to Girls' Dorm,
Margie, Jo, and I.

Oh, it was swell; so good to be back
Nothing could ever go wrong.

There were flowers in the living room,
The floors were freshly waxed.

Good old Girls' Dorm, the heart of all
The life upon the campus.

Four weeks later I went there again,
I walked on the same floor and stairs,
But I walked through ashes, cinders and dirt,
Through the ruin that didn't belong there.

I didn't dare walk in the upstairs hall,
Where I used to run when the bell rang.
The beds and dressers were twisted and charred
And the paint was smoky and peeled.

But God is good, I still believe,
For the dorm could well be a graveyard,
We lost our rooms, but we still have our friends,
And our memories aren't darkened by sorrow.

MISS DAMBOWY SERVES WITH PRIDE

The Significant Sixties

The sixties have brought with them a complete change at West Central. In the school year of 1959-1960, we followed the familiar pattern of years past, but the next year the absence of high school freshmen and the appearance of college freshmen initiated the change which was to take place in converting WCSA, as it had been, to a four-year liberal arts college. In the following resume we shall attempt to list the memorable events which have taken place in these significant 60's by recording the history of the class of 1963.

In the fall of 1959 because of a poor crop year and rumors of a college threatening hopes of graduation, our class enrollment of 50 proved to be the smallest in many years.

On October 21, Initiation Day was held. Each freshman became a slave to an upperclassman. All freshmen had to sweep and mop floors, polish shoes, make beds, and obey any other orders given us by the upperclassmen. We were decorated with shoe polish, lipstick, and other colorful media to give us a very hideous appearance. In the afternoon, a Field Day was held between the freshmen and sophomores. One event was a football game which was won by the sophomores by a score of 20-0. Mr. Smith coached us in our losing effort. Other events included 100 yd. dash, 400 yd. relay, three-legged races, softball and football throws, sack relay, and a cross country meet. The sophomores won the events with a score of 445 points to 155 points.

The following week were the festive homecoming activities, beginning with the building and guarding of the bonfire, a job always reserved for the freshman boys. After the bonfire a snake dance took place. The big game with Crookston was the following day. We won 33-6, thus regaining possession of the coveted "Ozzie". The dance was a real success following that victory and the royal couple, Kenwood Rund and LuWanna Foslien, were highly honored.

At an assembly in November, Superintendent Briggs confirmed the rumors concerning the establishment of the college. It was to take place through a year-by-year phasing out of our school combined with the addition of a college class each year. At first this meant only one thing to us, there would be no freshmen for us to dominate the following year.

On Parents' Day, November 25, Edson Hall was dedicated. It was at this time that Mr. Fenske gave confirmation of the plans for establishing the college here to our parents. In the afternoon class visits and tours were held.

The Christmas Program was held in Edson Hall for the first time. Mr. Ylvisaker was in charge of the program which included numbers by the chorus and smaller vocal groups in an elaborate stage setting.

After the Christmas holidays, we returned to find a growing evidence of preparation for college. The boys were moved from Spooner Hall, where they had stayed the first term, to the dorm above the dining hall, then known as Junior Girls dorm, so that Spooner Hall could be made ready for college residence. With this move, we also changed preceptors. Our first term we were managed by Mr. Conners and our winter term by Mr. Lystig.

During the winter term the swimming team finished the season with the defeat of Crookston and kept possession of "Virginia", the swimming trophy.

Our advisers for our first year were our school nurse, Miss Littlefield, and our engineering teacher, Mr. Schwieger.

A good time was enjoyed by everyone in the Canteen located in the basement of Edson Hall. Periodically, dances were given in the gym.

The Junior-Senior Prom was an exciting experience for us freshmen. We felt quite privileged to be invited to attend the big dance of the year.

Thirty-eight members of our class returned for our sophomore year. The boys all roomed in Senior Hall except eight juniors and seniors who stayed in the former faculty apartments in Junior Hall. The girls roomed above the Dining Hall and were supervised by Mrs. Schliep. Mr. Schwieger had left us so we elected Mr. Rued, who was our preceptor and shop instructor, as class adviser to assist Miss Littlefield.

It was interesting to observe the college freshmen as they arrived on campus and walked around in much the same manner that we had done when we were freshmen.

Although our football team did not compile a good winning record, it did have several memorable moments. In the Wheaton game, Loren Thorndson, a tackle, intercepted a pass and ran seventy yards for a touchdown. That same day Gary Knapp kicked a seventy-five yard punt to give us two very memorable moments. One moment many of us would like to forget was the day we lost to Crookston, 55-0, and again lost possession of "Ozzie".

The homecoming activities were highlighted once again by a hard-fought football game which we lost to Waseca by a narrow margin, 7-6. Again the big event at the dance after the game was the crowning of the King and Queen, Loren Thorndson and Patricia Lesmeister.

With the end of the 1961 cross country schedule came the end of the official running of WCSA cross country teams. They ended with a flourish defeating a Crookston team by placing 1-3-4-5-6-7-8 and thus winning the right to keep "Cleo" for all years to come.

Our wrestling team ended its final year of competition by winning the conference championship and placing four men in the undefeated ranks.

Our junior year showed another reduction in our members, this time to twenty students in our class.

This year all of the boys lived in Junior Hall and the girls in Girls' Dorm with Mrs. Johnson and Miss Littlefield as counselors. Mr. Leland Wilken joined the faculty to be preceptor in Junior Hall and to teach government and shop courses. Mr. Roy Thompson replaced Mr. Rued as our class adviser.

We became well acquainted with the fifty-seven seniors because we roomed in the same building and acquired many good friends among them.

Our final homecoming game was held on November 3. Snow had to be cleaned off the field and the sun caused very muddy playing conditions. Everyone was extremely excited and hoped that we would win the game and have the right to keep "Ozzie". Our team was "up" for the game and played hard to defeat Crookston, 14-6.

That evening the homecoming dance was held in the gym. This event was saddened considerably because of the fact that "Ozzie" could not be present. The usual festivities took place with the crowning of Gary Swensrud and Diane Jerpseth as King and Queen.

During this year, our sports teams finished out the final year of actual competition. The only teams that competed were the football and basketball teams. The football team ended with a 1-2 record, but finished the season with that victory over Crookston we had been hoping for all year. During the basketball season, a certain number of students were able to go to the games on the players' bus. The team didn't achieve a very good won-and-lost record but put up a good fight in the Ag School tournaments, coming in second in the final standings. This team was the only team that did not finish its record with a win over Crookston.

On December 8 and 9, our class had the distinction of presenting the final class play prepared by the West Central School students. It was a comedy, "Old Crusty Takes the Air", by Robert Merrill Sand. Mrs. Adolph Olson was our coach.

The Junior-Senior Prom was a memorable event. We, as juniors, decorated the Dining Hall and used the theme, "The Emerald Isle". The banquet and dance were both held in the dining hall because of the small number of students. The Jimmy Douglas band furnished the music.

On the first day of October, 1962, our class started the final year of the school. We registered in Engineering where we had all of our classes except business and home economics. The boys lived above the Dining Hall, now known as the Men's Annex. Both of the girls lived in Spooner Hall.

We were given a chance to have a cross-country team, so we recruited all the boys interested and practiced every night with Mr. Gray as our coach. We ran two meets: The Bison Invitational, where we finished seventh, and the Crookston meet, where we won by placing 2, 3, 5, 6 and 7. Since this was not an official meet, the win was not recorded on Cleo.

As a class we took two trips to the Twin Cities to see University of Minnesota games, namely: The Minnesota-Purdue football game and the Minnesota-Iowa basketball game. Both games were won by Minnesota.

Just before Christmas vacation we had a party in Spooner Hall which we had decorated appropriately. With our invited guests and faculty, we had fun dancing and eating and above all enjoyed a visit from Santa.

Our final class trip was a three-day excursion to Minneapolis. We traveled down on a school bus accompanied by Miss Littlefield and Mr. Hanke. Scheduled visits to a number of points of interest, including the State Capitol, Como Park, the Shrine Circus, the Airport, Southdale, and Cooper Theatre, made it a memorable event. Staying at the Maryland Hotel was in itself an unusual experience for most of us.

The last social event of the year was a Senior Prom held in the lower dining hall on Saturday, March 23. It was decorated around the theme "Tropical Paradise". We were especially grateful to the faculty who helped make the evening such an unforgettable event. The atmosphere created by the decorations, as well as the sumptuous buffet dinner, which included a whole roast pig, made it a truly unusual party.

Sunday, the twenty-fourth of March, we were entertained by Superintendent and Mrs. Smith at the traditional tea. The Baccalaureate Service was held in Edson Hall in the evening.

Professor Herbert G. Croom gave the commencement address for us, the final class to graduate from the West Central School of Agriculture, on Thursday, March 28, 1963.

Our Graduation Day was saddened by the death of Dean Fenske just two hours before our graduation exercises. By his many friends and associates he will be remembered as, "a man of ability, integrity, and faith."

The curtain falls at the end of this episode on our beloved campus in the continuing drama, "The Education of Youth."

SUPT. AND MRS. SMITH ENTERTAIN.

Rosters

An introduction to the roster of students and seniors is best expressed in the words of Evald Stark, Class of '29.

"A look at the long list of alumni is interesting. In many instances we note a repetition of names of families who have made use of the West Central School over the years. I happen to be the middle member of a family of eleven brothers and sisters, all of whom are graduates of this school. For an unbroken period of about twenty years our family had from one to three students attending at a time. Other families also have had 100% attendance. As one of the many thousands of Alumni of our dear Alma Mater, I wish most sincerely to pay tribute to all the faculty members who have so faithfully served as instructors, to my parents and all other parents whose sacrifices in our behalf have made it possible for us to receive these benefits. We shall ever be grateful."

We present these rosters of the faculty, the seniors, and the former students as recorded in the Moccasins, 1914-1963. We have supplied the current address whenever possible; sometimes we have used the latest known address or, as a last resort, the address on the original registration card. Unless otherwise indicated, the state is Minnesota.

Class of 1952 and 1953

Because the years of 1952 and 1953 mark the change in requirements for graduation from three years to four years, we combine the names of all third year students in 1952 with the seniors of 1953. This eliminates repetition of names that would occur in making two lists.

(4) Indicates membership in the first class that registered for the four year course.

To All "West Central Aggies"

"So long! It's been good to know you . . ."

As students — you have presented a challenge to your teachers;

As parents and citizens — you have accepted your responsibilities admirably.

We, your teachers, are proud of you and wish you success as you continue to strive to improve yourselves, your communities and our country.

Good Luck!

A pertinent paragraph in the bill to Congress in 1908 to change the Indian school to a secondary school read as follows: "Provided, that said lands and buildings shall be held and maintained by the State of Minnesota as an agricultural school, and that Indian pupils shall at all times be admitted to such school free of charge for tuition and on terms or equality with white pupils."

On October 31, 1959, the Board of Regents unanimously adopted the following resolution:

"That Board of Regents, following study for more than two years, has concluded that it is now desirable and feasible to begin the phasing out of high school level instruction at the West Central School and Station at Morris, Minnesota.

"In view of the current increasing number of high school graduates and the attendant demand for collegiate level educational opportunities, it is regarded as desirable and it has been judged feasible to begin collegiate instruction at the West Central School in the autumn of 1960.

"These administrative studies and Regent determinations are all in accord with the recommendations of the 1957-59 Interim Commission on Higher Education."

A familiar place in a building that is no more — but —

- - - The assigned seats at assembly where rank allowed Seniors the front rows and privileges
 - - - the advice and precepts expounded by superintendents
 - - - the twice a year music recitals and plays
 - - - the full length movies and lyceum presentations
 - - - the pep fests and class programs
 - - - the debate and speech contests
 - - - the Sunday evening Vespers, baccalaureate services and commencement exercises
- and the elaborate Christmas programs that represented hours of practice and art work, will remain among the pleasant memories of the alumni and friends of West Central.
